Soviet Tried to Rein In Libya on Mine Deal

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - The United States and the Soviet Union sent separate messages of concern to Libya several days ago in an effort to stop Tripoli from sending Sovi-et-made mines to Iran, U.S. officials have said.

The Soviet message to Libya was regarded as highly unusual because Libya is one of the largest Soviet arms clients and 5,000 to 6,000 Soviet bloc military advisers are reported to be stationed there.

The Soviet message was prompted by information passed to Mos-cow from U.S. intelligence reports last month that Libva was planning to deliver advanced Soviet-made mines to Iran in return for chemical weapons for use in Libya's war

The United States tried to stop the exchange by sending a warning to Libya on Aug. 30 and asking the Soviet Union and Turkey to forbid Libyan or Iranian flights over their territory in order to stop any deliveries, according to U.S. officials and Western diplomats.

Later, U.S. intelligence officials reported having seen cargo planes of Iran and Libya arriving in Tripo-ti and Tehran, and concluded that the deal had probably already gone through. But they said they were not certain of the contents of the

The United States sent the protest through a number of intermediaries, including Belgium, which represents U.S. interests in Libya. It warned Libya that should a U.S. vessel hit a mine sent by the Liby-ans, there would be "serious" consequences, the officials added.

The United States informed Iraq of the planned exchange in the hope that it might help cool relations between Iraq and Libya.

U.S. Trade Gap Hits a Record $16.47 Billion

By Anne Swardson ashington Post Service WASHINGTON - The U.S. merchandise trade deficit widened to a record $16.47 billion in July, the Commerce Department reported Friday, increasing the chances that the deficit for all of 1987 will be the highest ever. The figure was slightly higher

The dollar and prices of U.S. government bonds initially plunged on the news before recovering to post gains. A: one point the dollar dropped 1.5 pfennigs against the Deutsche mark before closing higher in New York at 1.8075 DM.

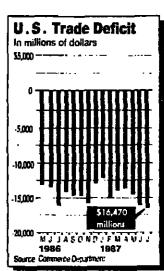

The 30-year U.S. government bond fell a full percentage point before rebounding as the dollar climbed off its lows. The recoveries in these markets added further strength to U.S. stock prices.

"This all falls under the heading of 'anticipation,' 's aid Larry Wachtel, market strategist for Prudential-Bache Securities. "Everybody's been anticipating a bad trade figure for weeks. When we finally got to the scene of the crime everybody yawned."

Analysts said the impact of the big July trade gap was blunted by the news on Thursday that Japan's trade surplus for August had shrunk dramatically to $5.15 billion from $7.48 billion. They said vestors took the Japanese figure as a better indicator of the trend in world trade.

U.S. exports, which had been risng through most of 1987, did a turnabout in July and dropped by 5 percent, to $21 billion. Manuractured goods accounted for much of this decline, falling to $13.8 billion from $14.5 billion in June.

Imports, meanwhile, rose 2 percent to $37.5 billion in July, largely because of higher petroleum imports, which grew to $4.4 billion from $3.7 billion.

The July figure marked the fourth consecutive month of deterioration in the trade figures. For the trading deficit has been accumulating at an annual rate of $168.7 billion — greater than the record $156.2 deficit for all of 1986.

"I did not know of Lonetree's alleged involvement in espionage until I read it in the media," his statement said, referring to the marine gnard who served under him in Moscow. The guard, Sergeant Clayton I. Lonetree, was sentenced last month to 30 years in prison for espionage in a sex-related case.

Zimbabwe Buys Share Of Industrial Group

HARARE, Zimbabwe - The Zimbabwe government has exercised its option to buy nearly onethird of the shares in Delta Corp., a South African-controlled group that is Zimbabwe's biggest trading conglomerate, officials said Friday.

A Delta statement said the gov-ernment had bought 6.6 million shares in the group, which operates

U.S. Will Help West Rejects Third World Aid Drive Israel Pay for East Bloc Seeks Pledge to Use Funds Gained by Arms Cuts

WASHINGTON - The administration of President Ronald Reagan confirmed on Friday its commitment to ease the financial pain of Israel's decision to cancel the controversial Lavi fighter plane project, according to U.S. and Israeli officials. Secretary of State George P. A Long Shot in the Gulf

Javier Pérez de Cuéllar goes to Iran and Iraq with full support from the United States, the Soviet Union and almost every other country. The mullahs of Tehran and the military leaders in Baghdad would be wise to note that the United Nations secretary-general speaks from strength when he asks them to start putting the UN cease-fire resolution into effect. The side that says no seems likely to face a second Security Council resolution, imposing an arms embargo. Mr. Pérez de Cuellar deserves every bit of that support. It is also nice to see the great powers and the UN bestir themselves to take sensible initiatives for peace.

The current unity holds a moral for the Reagan administration also: It may well be possible to work with Mikhail Gorbachev in the Gulf, and impossible to settle disputes there without him.

Without a serious diplomatic effort, in-cluding Moscow, the United States would have to try to sustain an enormous, costly naval buildup in the Gulf indefinitely. Meanwhile, however, Mr. Pérez de Cuéllar does not hesitate to acknowledge that the U.S. naval presence bolsters his diplomacy. The Iranians doubtless feel isolated, even beleaguered. The secretary-general will soon see whether that is sufficient to bring

He is not betting on it, but he is going on the assumption that both sides will accept the cease-fire resolution and that the problems will focus on how it is carried out. Even here, Mr. Pérez de Cuéllar appears well prepared. He has plans for constructing ssions to effect various provisions of the resolution. But he has not made clear how they will reach decisions. He knows it will be hard to recruit the thousands of observers required to police the cease-fire. He knows the difficulties of assigning war guilt or reparations but also knows he has to plow ahead if Tehran is to stay aboard.

His strategy, and it is the right one, is to push ahead on such daunting details. That is the best way to find out whether Tehran and Baghdad mean it, should they accept the cease-fire. If the warring parties are not prepared to tackle the details, the secretarygeneral rightly intends to report this to the Security Council. Given what is now known of views there, that would prompt a resolution mandating an arms embargo.

The UN enterprise is a long shot but right now, it is the only chance for peace in the Gulf, and a tremendous opportunity for UN diplomats to show their institution can work.

debt to foreign banks, under this proposal, was to be discounted to its present market value - about 55 percent of the original loans - and converted into bonds. Other people called it a partial default. When Finance Minister Luiz Carlos Bresser Pereira brought this plan to Washington, Treasury Secretary James Baker said promptly and publicly that it was a "nonstarter."

Mr. Baker was trying to deliver a clear warning to Brazil. It is heading for serious economic trouble if it persists in debt management schemes that the rest of the world considers frivolous. In response to Mr. Baker. Brazil has now withdrawn the debt conversion plan and apparently has agreed to stick to more conventional arrangements. That is promising. A write-down of the Brazilian debt is the wrong way to go.

Brazil is not one of the world's hard-luck cases. Its industrial power is rising rapidly. Its economy has grown spectacularly over the past several years - too fast, the inflation rate suggests. It is running large trade surpluses. The reason the market value of the debt has fallen to 55 percent of its original value is not any fundamental weakness or incapacity of the Brazilian economy. It is simply that since February, Brazil has refused to pay interest on the loans. To reduce

From the Brazilian viewpoint, it was a them to current market value is to reward marvelous idea. Half of Brazil's enormous the debtor country for having deliberately the debtor country for having deliberately eroded its own credit rating.

A foreign loan that is defaulted or written down is, in effect, foreign aid - involuntary, but genuine foreign aid all the same. The money would come out of banks' capital rather than from government budgets, but it is real money and the costs would be borne by the lending countries, including the United States. Brazil does not have the highest claim on the next billion dollars of American aid, Incomes in Brazil are more than twice as high as, for example, in the Philippines, which is also struggling along under a heavy load of debt.

Brazil's handling of its debts is complicated by the inexperience of its political leadership, working in a very recently restored democracy. But the decisions on debt come down to one essential choice: whether to stay in the international system of lending and payment or to cut the country off and live in isolation. If Brazil chooses to stay in, there will be plenty of room for negotiation on the terms. There is a lot of respect for Brazil in the United States. But Brazil cannot expect the rest of the world to accept multibilliondollar write-offs of present loans while continuing to lend and trade normally. Secretary Baker gave Mr. Bresser Pereira good advice.

It is not surprising that a majority of the committee gave its highest rating, "well qualified," to Judge Bork. But it is a surprise that five members of the 15-member panel did not join in this recommendation. While the ABA has not announced the vote, it has been reported widely that one lawyer was simply "not opposed," and four others found the nominee "not qualified."

The Bork nomination has been extremely controversial. But until this week the argument against putting Judge Bork on the Supreme Court concerned his judicial philosophy, not his legal ability. That ability was assumed. This is a man, after all, who has been a partner in some major law firms, a law professor at Yale, the solicitor-general of the United States and, for six years, a judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals. One would have thought that somewhere along the way, his competence would have been challenged. Quite the opposite is the case. When he was nominated for the appeals court, this same har association committee was unanimous in giving him its highest rating.
That designation, according to the ABA, is reserved for those who "stand at the top of and professional contributions." What could have happened between that finding and the more recent one that convinced a substantial minority of the committee that the nomines is now not even minimally qualified?

The chairman of the committee, Judge Harold Tyler of New York, has an obligation to do much more than simply appear before the Judiciary Committee next week, announce the vote and discuss the majority finding. The decision of the dissenters must be accounted for as well. The ABA is never asked to make political judgments about a nominee. According to its own guidelines, the panel "is intended to weigh professional competence, not to assess the ideology of the prospective nominee." The clear implication of the negative votes therefore is that in the minds of those who cast them, Judge Bork is incompetent or flawed in personal integrity or judicial temperament. These are serious judgments on a man whose reputation in these areas has thus far been good. The specifics of the minority findings need to be made public, and the nominee should have a chance to reply. The ABA owes that to all. -THE WASHINGTON POST.

Talk of an Open Border

By alluding Thursday in Neunkirchen to the prospect of a normalization of the inter-German border, [Erich] Honecker suddenly gave his West German visit a new dime sion. Should his words be written off to the emotions of a 75-year-old man who, after a 40-year absence, returns to the family home where his sister still lives? The most hardened man could not remain insensitive to such a reunion with the past.

But a leader as experienced as East Germany's is not prone to chance improvisation. The Neunkirchen town hall provided a podium from which his declaration would not appear overly solemn, while at the same time opening new perspectives, both encouraging and vague. Regardless, the allusion to the raising of the stillmurderous Iron Curtain, the most striking symbol of Europe's division, cannot fail to awaken hope in both the Germanys. - Le Monde (Paris).

Arms: A Sudden Discordance

The direction of recent Soviet arguments [on arms control] implies either that Moscow suspects the United States is being devious to the point of total dishonesty, or that Moscow itself is beginning to have doubts about the grand scope of the agreement.

After the blitz of disarmament proposals by Mikhail Gorbachev at Reykjavik, why is suddenly the Soviet side that is hedging its bets? Abolition of all the weapons is a concept of extreme simplicity, yet Viktor Kar-pov [the head of the Soviet Foreign Ministry's arms control department] says the problem is "much deeper than it looks." Why should that be suddenly so?

A Strategy for the West to Seize the Opening to the East remain the cornerstone of American policy.

N EW YORK — We are entering the fourth major period in which some progress toward settling the rivalry with the Soviet Union is possible. Since World War II there have been three moments for such progress: after Stalin died in 1953, after the Cuban missile crisis of 1962 and during the 1969-1972 period of detente. Each period yielded some progress, and consequently the conflict has become less volatile. But each period ended in failure. It is this inability to stabilize the relationship that is dangerous and that challenges the current American and Soviet leaderships.

For American policy. Mikhail Gorbachev is a complicating factor. There is a strong temptation in the United States to "help" him because he presents himself as a liberal reformer — which in fact he may be. Moreover, a good case can be made, as Andrei Sakharov has done, that General Secretary Gorbachev may be the last best hope, lest a far more rothless regime take over. But this cannot be a basis for Western policy. Mr. Gorbachev may be in power for a month, or for decades. He may abandon his reforms and become another Leonid Brezhnev, or like Nikita Khrushchev challenge the West dangerously as his domestic position weakens.

What the West needs to survive these potential twists and turns is a general strategy that recognizes that there indeed are domestic changes under way in the Soviet Union, but which tempers that recognition with a hardheaded assertion of Western security requirements. We should help Mr. Gorbachev only if we thereby help ourselves.

To deal effectively with the Soviet Union we must

clever schemes to solve the latest problem. The starting point has to be the clear recognition of the source of strength of America's international position — its alliance with Europe and Japan.

For some reason the United States refuses to learn how to live with the undeniable success of U.S. foreign policy since World War II. Despite the setbacks, failures and outright catastrophes, the Western cause has grown in strength. Few alliances have been more successful than NATO; rarely have major powers so quickly put the animosities of a great conflict behind them. And rarely has one of the victorious powers come to dominate the world as the United States has. It must continue to lead a powerful coalition of forces to contain the Soviet Union, but it will have to do so in an era vastly different from the period of the coalition's creation. America has won the ideological war, it is close to winning the geopolitical contest in the Third World, except for the Middle East.

Yet there remains a nearly irresistible strain of isolationism in the United States. This is reflected in the continuing concern with altering the Atlantic alliance and withdrawing from Europe. Americans must resist the periodic temptation to tinker with a successful alliance, to play with various forms of U.S. involvement. There is nothing more encouraging to the Soviet leaders in their times of trouble than the hope that sooner or later the United States will disengage from Western Maintaining an anti-Soviet coalition has become more complicated by America's tentative alliance with China; the natural course for Chinese-American relations would be to move to-ward a closer military relationship. But the U.S. connection to China needs to be handled with extreme care. The United States has limited mutual interests with China beyond the common opposition to Moscow. The new generation of Soviet leaders will seek greater flexibility in Chinese-Soviet relations. And sooner or later there will be a new generation of power in Beijing that will not have experienced the clashes with Moscow of the 1960s and 1970s. All of this will be unsettling for Washington unless it accepts the limits to its relations with China.

A successful alliance policy cannot ignore the fact that the industrial democracies will not support a foreign policy that does not include an effort at détente with the Soviet Union. America's Western allies and Japan obviously want both containment and coexistence. This may even be the basis on which the Chinese are prepared to join with the United States. So Washington must engage in negotiations with Moscow, including arms control talks, not only for the sake of its alliances but because this is in America's self-interest.

WASHINGTON — On Ang. 7 in Guatemala City, Daniel By Charles Krauthammer

Ortega Saavedra signed a peace beings: On Sept. 8, Mr. Ortega turned treaty in which he pledged, among other things, pluralism and demonstrations with clubs and cattle prods, or are they going to allow freedom of assembly? Will La Prensa be allowed to resume publishing? in Managua, Mr. Ortega's police broke up a human rights demonstration held to test that pledge.

The nation was protected from pluralism by cattle prods, batons and attack dogs. And just to be sure, Lino Hernandez, leader of Nicaragua's Permanent Commission on Human Rights, and Alberto Saborio, head of the Nicaraguan Bar Association, were thrown in jail.

The human rights commission was established in General Anastasio Somoza's day, at which time Mr. Hernåndez defended Sandinists and other government opponents. Inconveniently for the Sandinists, he carried on his work after the new dictators took over. He has been representing the wives and families of Nicaragua's 6,000 to 8,000 political prisoners. To arrest such a man is a significant signal that whatever they sign in Guaemala City, the Sandinists rule in Managua. The signal did not transmit well up to the United States. The story made Page 15 of The Washington Post and Page 4 of The New York Times. On the whole, the arrest served the Sandinists well. It raised no protest from Sandinist sympathizers in the United States. It intimidated the local opposition. It gave the Sandinists the occasion for performing that Commu-

Best of all, breaking up the opposition demonstration lowered the standard of what constitutes good democratic behavior on the part of the Sandinists. If they merely refrain from breaking up the next political rally in Managua, that will be hailed as a significant sign of moderation.

Will political prisoners be released? That litmus test of Sandinist behavior came from a White House official.

Well, say that the White House gets satisfactory answers to these questions. The administration is setting itself up for a policy disaster by letting contra aid hinge on such ges-tures. If the Sandinists do open a newspaper, if they do allow a Catholic radio station to return to the air, if they release some political prisoners terly adrift on Nicaragua policy. "Are — so what? Nicaragua: A Land of Mary as Much as Marx

T O avoid being called soft on communism, opponents of aid to the contrast feel they must begin with the genuflection that the Sandinists are odious and have made an abhorrent failure of their revolution.

The Sandinist revolution, we seem to forget, is not ours but theirs. It is a revolution far less about what we in the United States accept as democracy than it is about food, jobs, medicine, literacy and land. It is about breaking the stranglehold of oligarchy, army and the Roman Catholic Church, which kept most Nicaraguans in peonage for centuries.

The revolution has broken that stranglehold and at least made a start in health, education and the redistribution of land and resources. The private sector still accounts for more than 50 percent of the economy. By taking land from absentee owners, the agrarian reform program has served landholders who work their own farms at least as much as it has encouraged embryonic attempts at collectivization. And the Virgin Mary is still venerated far above Marx. Is this revolution such a failure — or should the "totalitarian dungeon," as President Reagan calls it, be judged in its own context?

Such Cassandra-stuff has been heard before. It has never been the whole truth, but neither has it been totally without foundation. Before being swaved by this loose talk, let us try to penetrate the haze emerging from the crystal balls used by the economic soothsayers.

The heart of the matter is that total debt now equals a proportion of gross national product dangerously close to the ratio that existed just before the crash of 1929. Basic economic relations have been distorted. They need to be re-established, and the only leasible way to do this is to reduce debt. Bankruptcies following the 1929 crash did just that. The result was an abrup' decline in production and a corresponding rise in unemployment along with deflation. This dismal performance is, however, not about to be repeated.

It has long been clear that the public debt will never be redeemed in real terms. It is simply impossible. A tax rise to that end would throw the economy into reverse; it would be political and economic suicide to raise taxes to finance a growing public deficit.

After a few years the abatement of the now spectacular public debt is not about rights. It is about power. It is not about whether a political rally or a nongovernment newspaper will be permitted. It is about whether the Leninist regime will monopolize power and dispense these rights. Because so long as it dispenses the rights, they will not be safe.

The Sandinists promised similar rights to the Organization of American States in 1979, and granted just enough of them — a moderately free press and a formally open political system — for just long enough to keep U.S. aid flowing, to strip their democratic allies of all power and to consolidate their own. Then they systematically abolished these rights. If Mr. Ortega is smart (and he is), he will allow La Prensa to reopen. He will allow a few opposition parties to hold rallies. He will offer a freed prisoner or two as a party favor to a passing political pilgrim from the United States. With support from congressional liberals, he will then demand in return for these eminently revocable moves that the United States reciprocate by cutting off the contras. Demo-crats will oblige. And the Reagan administration has so maneuvered itself that it too may have to say yes.

The depth of the debacle will be apparent when Mr. Ortega is con-firmed in power for good and the Democrats, having won the Nicaragua debate, escape the consequences of their victory. In 10 years, when President Oscar Arias Sanchez of Costa Rica takes his Nobel Peace Prize into Miami exile. Americans will ask who lost Central America. The answer will be that the Democrats thought up the idea first, but they never could have done it without Ronald Reagan.

Too Late For Bork?

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON — The fight over the nomination of Judge Robert Bork to the Supreme Court is a parties for years at a time, the role of the court as resolver of political and. institutional deadlocks has grown: The court has been forced to accept this function in addition to its:

historic task of judging legislative enactments, executive actions and low-er-court decisions against the stan-dards set forth by the constitution. In its role as political referee, the court has virtually forced the resignation of President Richard Nixon, curbed Congress's assertion of one-house veto authority over a range of executive decisions, and reshaped the conduct of presidential and congressional races by striking down part of the conduct of presidential and congressional races by striking down part of the conference of the the campaign finance law.

It is not surprising, therefore, that presidential candidates promise to make certain kinds of court appointments, as Ronald Reagan did. Nor is it surprising that the political opposition often opposes those choices.

These inevitable political considerations are heightened by the fact that Judge Bork is not an ordinary appointee. He is a man of exceptions! intellectual vigor, who for years has argued a view of the constitution and its application that is radical in its assumptions and critical of what has become the mainstream of judicial thinking in the past two generations.

To say that Judge Book is unconventional in his views is not to say that he is unsuitable for the court; this difference cries out for evaluation. He could well tip the balance in a court that has had a multitude of 5-4 decisions. Senator Joseph Biden, Democrat of Delaware, who will preside at the Judiciary Committee hearings starting Tuesday, has learned a lesson in prejudging Judge Bork.

In a recent interview, Mr. Biden said: "I am not saying, as some of my colleagues do, that I can predict with certainty how Judge Bork would vote on the Supreme Court. And even if he does vote the way he has argued and written, I cannot say for certain what his impact would be. It is conceivable that Bork's arguments might cause another justice to move in the opposite, more moderate direction. "But," he continued, "it is clear It does not even prove they are that Bork has fundamental doubts about significant, established principles of the law - civil rights, civil It proves only that Mr. Ortega is wise and other questions. If he had been enough to know that in the weeks on the court for the past 30 years and > a very different country."

> That is a fair assessment. It is also fair to say that the hypothetical nation of which Mr. Biden speaks would likely bear a close resemblance to the one Ronald Reagan has described in many campaign speeches. Few voters could have doubted that Mr. Reagan attached just as great importance to reversing "judicial activism" as to rolling back taxes and reducing federal interventions in private about mentioning Supreme Court decisions he hoped to see reversed, including those on abortion, affirmative when Mr. Biden says that "Reagan has the advantage going in" with the nomination of Judge Bork, he is acknowledging a simple fact of political life about any appointment from the hand of a president who has won two landslide victories. But in 1986, as Mr. Biden points out, when Mr. Reagan campaigned in states like North Carolina for Republican candidates, saying that a Democratic Senate might block his Supreme Court nominees, voters rejected the incumbents he was supporting.

Had Judge Bork been appointed in any year between 1981 and 1986, the political case for his confirmation would have been overwhelming. Now the politics are open to debate. The Bork appointment looks like a lastminute effort to cement into the judicial branch a philosophy that may be losing its voter appeal.

It should offend no one that the battle has this intensely political coloration. The pope's visit reminds us that even those who have a higher calling are chosen through a political mechanism. The Senate will be no holier than the College of Cardinals. The Washington Post.

Unlikely in Vote in New Caledonia

Self-Rule

NOUMEA, New Caledonia -The referendum Sunday on selfdetermination for New Caledonia is expected to bring an overwhelming vote for the Pacific territory to remain part of France, according to analysts. The result is considered nearly inevitable because pro-indepen-dence parties, which represent mainly the indigenous Melane-sians, or Kanaks, have called for a boycott of the vote. To prevent disorder, the French authorities have sent riot police reinforcements, raising the force to 600 in the territory, and have increased the number of gendarmes

But the leadership of the main pro-independence organization, the Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front, has called on its folowers to observe its policy of nonriolence until after the referendum.

Occasional political violence in New Caledonia since 1984 has resulted in 24 deaths. Nearly 80,000 registered voters will be entitled to participate in the referendum, casting yellow ballots for independence or blue ones for remaining a French territory.

Only three parties took part in the official political campaign, which ended Friday.

The conservative Rally for Caledonia in the Republic, headed by Jacques Lafleur, a businessman of French origin, and the extreme-right National Front both called for a vote in favor of the Pacific territory remaining French.

The Kanak Socialist Liberation Movement, a minor pro-independence party, participated in the campaign only to benefit from broadcasting time on the official radio. Like the other pro-independence parties, it called for a boycott of the referendum.

Jean-Marie Tjibaou, president of the Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front, called on both Foa and Bouloupari.

The population figures favor the anti-independence parties, which are mainly backed by French settlers and Polynesian, Indonesian, Vietnamese and other immigrants.

The Kanaks represent about 43 percent of the population. French settlers and others make up the remaining 57 percent.

The separatist front usually speaks in the name of "the Kanak people" and its call for a boycott will be a trial of strength with the French authorities.

The Rally for Caledonia in the Republic disputes the front's claim to represent all Melanesians. Two New Caledonia, and voting is not of the party's most prominent politicians are Melanesians. New Caledonia has been calm

Afghan Talks Snagged On Troop Withdrawals

By Thomas W. Netter New York Times Service GENEVA - A new round of negotiations on the seven-year conflict in Afghanistan has ended here without producing the major concessions from the Soviet-backed Afghan government that had been stani official said. The official, Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, said Thursday that he was disappointed that the foreign minister of Afghanistan, Abdul Wakil, had proposed only a 16-month schedule for the withdrawal of 115,000 Soviet soldiers from Afghanistan, or two months less than the last Afghan proposal offered during the previous round of talks, which ended in Geneva on March 9.

[Mr. Yaqub Khan said he believed the Alghan move had been a "propaganda ploy" aimed at diffusing criticism at the coming United Nations General Assembly ses- cials said. sion in New York, Reuters reported Friday from Geneva.

[He said the Alghan delegation Kenya Restricts at the talks had given no explanation for why it made the surprise request that a round be arranged stily. Then, he said, Mr. Wakil behaved throughout as if Pakistan had called the session and kept demanding that Mr. Yaqub Khan produce a new offer.)

Pakistan, which is backed by the United States, insisted in the latest round on the Soviet troops being withdrawn within eight months one month more than it had earlier demanded.

This narrowed the difference between the two sides from 11 nonths to eight mouths, indicating that the Soviet Union was still not ready for an agreement but was interested in keeping alive expectations of a pullout.

The latest round of talks had been called by the Soviet-backed Afghan government, and before its opening Monday there was considerable speculation in Pakistan and at the United Nations that the reason for Kabul's requesting the meeting was to allow Afghanistan and the Soviet Union to reduce

Correspondents

Agence France-Presse NAIROBI - No Swedish or Norwegian journalist will be allowed into Kenya in the future, and all foreign correspondents already in the country will have their status reviewed, President Daniel arap Moi has announced.

The statement Thursday followed attacks on Kenya's human rights record that caused Mr. Moi to cancel official visits this month to Oslo and Stockholm. Mr. Moi said that, because of the attitude of the Norwegian and Swedish governments toward Kenya, the status of foreign journalists based in Nairobi would be re-examined.

Just over 100 foreign journalists, including some Scandinavians, are based in Nairobi, Amnesty International, the independent human rights monitoring group, published a report alleging torture, political detention and unfair trials of dissidents that was widely covered in the Norwegian and Swedish press shortly before President Moi was due to visit those countries.

ST. GEORGE'S UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

Approved February 4, 1987 by the New York State Education Department for the purpose of conducting a clinical clerkship program in New York teaching hospitals. St. George's received a similar approval in 1985 from the New Jersey Board of Medical Examiners; this establishes St. George's as the only foreign medical school with instruction in English that has state-approved campuses in both New York and have been seen to be considered.

Over 700 students have transferred to U.S. medical schools, St. George's has duated over 1,140 physicians They are licensed in 44 states. They hold faculty positions in 20 U.S. medical schools – 25% have been Chief Residents in 119 U.S. hospitals (according to a 1986 survey).

St. George's is entering its second decade of medical education. In the first decade, we were cited by The Journal of the American Medical Association (January 1985)

we were cited by the Journal of the American Association (Jamany 1923) as ranking number one of all major foreign medical schools in the initial pass rate on the ECFMG cram.

St. George's is one of the few foreign medical schools whose students qualify for Guaranteed Student Loans. Our students also qualify for the PLUS/ALAS loans and, under certain conditions, VA loans. St. George's grants a limited number of loans and scholarships to entering students.

In those the picture was illustrated in the picture all right, but by Henri Zo, not by Zuloaga. On closer inspection the signature turned out to be "Zo" extended into a Zuloaga with the top of the "O" chopped off. The the London Impressionist depart-ment's man on the spot. "Sotheby's S.A.R.L." was established in January 1974 and Impressionists trickled to London in growing numbers. That summer, Blondeau made his first significant move beyond Impressionist boundaries. His friend Joe Setton, the Art Nouveau collector and dealer, had suggested that there was only one way to beat the French auctioneers, who shielded themselves from direct competition through protectionist law — go to Monte Carlo, an independent principality. The Société des Bains de Mer had actually approached the French auctioneers' national body, offering to help in various ways should they be willing to hold auctions. The French auctioneers scornfully turned down the chance. Sotheby's rushed in at the instigation of Blondeau, fully backed by Sotheby's chairman, Peter Wilson. In May 1975 they had their maiden auction with the collections of the Baron de Rédé and Baron Guy de Rothschild. That launched the new branch in the midst of suitable media attention. A wonderful bronze horse described by Sotheby's as a product of the Susini workshop in the late 16th or early 17th century, and by others as not earlier than the 18th century, went up to 1.65 million francs.

The next coup paid off even bet-ter in terms of publicity. Paul Bianchini, a friend who ran a well-known New York gallery, told Blondeau that he should look around railway stations for memorabilia. He pointed out that things such as railway carriages fitted with glass panels by Lalique were not unheard of - witness the Orient Express and the Train Bleu on the Paris-Nice line. The great railway carriage sale took place on Oct. 8, 1977 - suitably followed by Art Deco. The King of Morocco bought two carriages, James B. Sherwood, the Sea Container magnate, another two, and a Swiss collector got the fifth.

Meanwhile serious business went on. Blondeau landed his first major describes as "the new Kremlin contingent of Impressionist paintings with the Robert Kahn Sriber collection sold in London on July 1, 1975, without any mention of the ty of market life. Committees, name. Monet's view of the Rouen cathedral in 1894 made £210,000 -a big price in those days.

Blondeau however already felt Would the dealer trace it? Alas, the that the Impressionist supply was not inexhaustible. He favored the In September 1973, the 28-year- creation of specialist departments in Monte Carlo. He found a badly needed expert for Old Master paintings named Eric Turquin. The first two sales were terrible, but the Frenchmen stuck to their guns, one backing the other. Eventually success came in October 1981 when the failure rate fell below 5 percent. In June 1985 a Carel Fabritius set a record at 7.2 million francs. The owner had been about to sell it for a million francs to the French National Museums agency when Tur-quin persuaded him to try his luck

The other innovation was expensive French furniture. Blondeau again was instrumental in hiring the right man, Alexandre Pradère, when Wilson asked him whether Sotheby's should consider Pradère. Playing back to his opposite number in New York, another Frenchman, Thierry Millerand, Pradère eventually built up Monte Carlo into a major place for top-rank fur-

Bursting with energy, bubbling with ideas, endowed with the rare gift of having no enemies while retaining a reputation of absolute straightforwardness, Blondeau seemed to have before him a prospect of indefinitely growing success at the head of Sotheby's France. He left for two reasons. One is what he style." Sotheby's management decisions are made from above by fmanciers unfamiliar with the realimeetings, memos are taking on cancerous proportions. "When red tape takes precedence over expertise and business-getting, it is not worth it anymore.

The positive reason behind Blondeau's decision to leave is his conviction that the market has reached a new stage. In the Impressionist and Modern Master field, auction houses have drastically modified the way it works. They are now the driving force. Auctions have pushed prices to a level where dealers can no longer provide their ser-vice of yore, which was buying and reselling. Few have either the capi-tal or the guts to stake it, so they take pictures on consignment. To try to create events - one-man shows such as Daniel Malingue's Dufy exhibition this year, which then induces their other colleagues or private clients to loan works.

The art gallery is becoming an office and the dealer an arbitrageur. This new situation creates an need for external referees to turn to and get advice on where, how and when to sell - London? New York? At auction? To a dealer? In setting up an art consultancy at 11 Rue de Miromesnil as of Oct.

15, Bloudeau believes he will be providing an answer to the problems of a growing number of buy-

Although the long-run effect of a narrowing of the deficit is to increase national savings and investment and thereby to raise productivity, in the short run a lower deficit, resulting from a curb on government spending and a rise in taxes, tends to slow the growth of the economy.

The outlook now is for the

eral deficit to $146 billion in the financial year 1988, $140 billion

Without those spending cuts and tax increases, the deficit, according to the estimates of the Congressional Budget Office, would be $183 billion, $192 billion and $176 billion in the next

Both the Republicans and Democrats in Congress appear determined to keep the budget deficit on the decline from this year's $157 billion. Congress is soon expected to set targets under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit-reduction law; these limits could hardly be higher than the deficits projected in the already adopted budget resolution; those deficits for 1988 and 1989 are only a little lower than the current year's deficit.

It would also be extremely difficult to make the deficit targets much lower than in the budget resolution, since that would require much bigger tax increases or much steeper spending cuts.

would come from higher taxes and 20 percent from reducing the growth in military budget authority below the rate of inflation.

Since current military spending relies largely on past appropriations, spending would be only $2 billion lower than currently expected in 1988. But in 1989 it would be $12 billion lower, and

Hence, it looks as though the budget deficit will be shrinking a burden on monetary policy in defending the dollar and warding off inflation with higher interest rates. Wall Street might be reavous about higher rates, but over time the Fed could well be looking for a way to ease, lest the economy topple into recession.

Hewlett Is Automating, and Just in Time

A Skeptic, It Waited for a Big Advance

By Barnaby J. Feder New York Times Service PALO ALTO, California -Hewlett-Packard Co. is grudging-ly becoming a believer in automa-

That is a notable change for a company long known as a leading skeptic about the value of heavy investments in such high-tech equipment as robotics. In the past, the maker of measuring instruments and computers has achieved remarkable gains in productivity by mixing modest in-vestments with skillful management - much to the chagrin of companies that have spent heavily on automation.

These days, however, Hewlett-Packard is borrowing from the manufacturing strategies of companies that have invested heavily in automated production, such as International Business Machines Corp. and Apple Computer Inc.
To be sure, Hewiett-Packard still preaches that people can often be more productive than machines. Even so, its spending on automation is rising steadily, exceeding $300 million last year. One reason is that the compo-nents of electronics products in-creasingly are too densely packed and finely aligned for humans to assemble easily. It helps, too, that the performance of automation

Finally, Hewlett-Packard and some other companies that had focused on increasing productivity by changing the way they man-aged materials and workers now feel they are in a position to reap the full benefits of automation.

"They have done a terrific job in laying the groundwork for automation," said Steven Walleck, head of McKinsey & Co.'s manufacturing consulting prac-tice in Cleveland.

Just as importantly, Hewlett-Packard has evolved from the Silicon Valley start-up that made its name with high-performance, high-priced instruments and specialty computers into a feistier company under John Young, its current chairman and chief exec-As computer-related exics have.

By reducing the number of parts in their products, they made it easier to oversee manufacturing. That made Hewlett-Packard one of the front-runners in the current "design for manufacturability" trend that is sharply improving efficiency in the manufacture of everything from home appliances to automobiles.

But the company's organizational division has been a twoedged sword. Hewlett-Packard discovered that lack of coordination was leading to competing product designs, inefficient pur-chasing and confusion among customers, who increasingly demanded that Hewlett-Packard's products be compatible with each other and those of other suppli-

the first time in nine months, the government reported Friday.

The Labor Department said that lower food costs and auto discounts offset slightly higher energy prices to keep overall producer prices virtually unchanged from July. The report helped dispel fears of renewed inflation. The department's Producer Price

Index actually fell by a minuscule amount from July, but officials said that the drop was insignificant after adjusting for seasonal varia-tions. The last time wholesale prices for finished goods did not increase was in November 1986. Wholesale prices had edged up

0.2 percent in July and in June.
Energy prices rose 1.5 percent in August, the same rate of increase as in July, as wholesale gasoline prices climbed 4.2 percent.
Wholesale prices for cars dropped 1.8 percent, the Labor Department said, as manufacturers provided dealers with incentives earlier than usual to help clear their lots for 1988 models. Food prices fell by 1,3 percent after a 0.6 percent decline in July, reversing sharp increases last spring.

Excluding the normally volatile food and energy categories, wholesale prices for a wide variety of consumer goods rose 0.3 percent in August, compared with a 0.2 percent increase in July.

The overall price stability in August brought the annual rate of inflation for wholesale prices to 3.6 percent for the first eight months of 1987, down from 4.2 percent for the first seven months. Just last week, the Federal Reserve cited "potential inflationary pressures" in the economy as its reason for boosting the discount rate from 5.5 percent to 6 percent. The Fed did not describe the inflationary pressures that motivated it to effectively apply brakes to rate of only 2.6 percent in the second quarter. Private analysts said that the action was taken in an effort to halt a free-fall in the value of the dollar on currency exchanges.

Donald Ratajczak, who runs his own survey of wholesale price trends at Georgia State University, predicted that overall price increases would remain below 4 per-

For 1988, Mr. Eggert said, the consensus is that inflation will increase to 4.6 percent.

Bank Creditors Urge Relief for Brazil IMF Debt

LONDON — Some of Bra-zil's creditor banks are propos-ing a debt plan under which the International Monetary Fund would take the unprecedented step of restructuring about $1.9 billion in IMF loans to Brazil. banking sources said. The move would have broad implications for all IMF creditors because the international agency has said it will not restructure loans. It also refuses to lend to a country, like Brazil, that has not accepted IMF proposals for economic change. The plan is expected to be discussed by Brazil's committee of creditor banks before the IMF/World Bank annual meetings later this month.

The sources said that if the IMF cooperated, the banks would lend Brazil fresh funds, allowing it to pay about $7.1 billion of interest due to banks in 1987 and 1988.

Brazil could improve its chances with the IMF, bankers said, if its leaders adopted a long-term economic program that could eventually receive the agency's approval

The announcement, greeted with surprise by share analysts, fueled speculation that a major strategic reshuffle of Montedison's business activities could be expected. Montedison will emerge from sales of $981 million. The size of the Montedison transaction caught many analysts by surprise. Mario Mauri, finance director of Montedison, acknowledged that the operation would sharply raise Montedison's already

But the company said in a statement that no negotiations were under way to sell any part of the group. The Wall Street Journal reported Compagnie du Midi, which is involved in banking, investment and property as He said his company had met with Companie du Midi several weeks ago about a quoted companies with a market capitalwell as insurance, is one of France's largest ization of 20 billion French francs ($3.31 billion). In 1986, it posted a consolidated net profit of 1 billion francs and revenue of 13 billion francs.

lus subsidiary Assurances du Groupe de Paris SA has premium income of about £800 million, most of it in nonlife insurance products. Its subsidiaries operate in Belgium, Italy, Spain and Monaco.

Equity & Law, a life insurance and fund management group based in London, had a 1986 pretax profit of £8.3 million. Premium and investment income in 1986 amounted to £568.8 million. It has subsidiaries in Belgium, West Germany, the Netherlands and the Isle of Man.

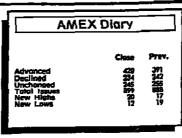

Compagnie du Midi said it planned to expand further into other European Com-munity countries. It said that if its bid were successful, it would keep Equity & Law as a separate group to spearhead that growth.

The figures from the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development showed that the French tax system relied heavily on social security contributions, while direct in-come tax was relatively low. In 1986, social security contributions accounted for 43.6 percent of total French taxation, compared with 36.5 percent in West Germany and 17.5 percent

This feature of the French tax system is likely to be exaggerated when the government an-nounces its 1988 budget next week, the OECD said. The budget is expected to include direct tax cuts of about 4 percent for most income groups, which will be partly compensated for by a recent rise in social security contributions.

Direct taxes accounted for 17.1 percent of total French taxes, compared with more than 45.8 percent in Japan, 42.8 percent in the United States, 38.9 percent in Britain and 34.8 percent in West Germany.

British consumers contribute comparatively more through taxes on goods and services than more through taxes on goods and services than the other four nations, the OECD said. In Britain, those taxes accounted for more than 30 percent of total tax revenue, slightly more than percent of total tax revenue, slightly more than That would include about 200 million yen in operating profit.

Semiconductor Indicator Falls, but Shipments Up

SAN FRANCISCO - The semiconductor industry's leading indicator fell in August, reflecting a seasonal slowdown, according to the Semiconductor Industry Association. But al-though orders for chips declined, shipments rose as the industry's recovery continued, the three-month period that ended in August, down from revised figures of 1.15 for July and 1.16 for June. A ratio of 1.08 indicates that for every $100 worth of products shipped, $108 worth

At $943.7 million, orders for the three months AT 3943.7 million, orders for the three months through August were down 3.8 percent from 3981.1 million in July, and were 33.5 percent above the $706.8 million posted a year earlier.

Average shipments for the three months were $875.2 million. Shipments for August rose 9.8 percent, to $885.2 million, from $806.3 million $100.00 mill in July, and 26.9 percent, from $697.5 million in August 1986.

TOKYO — Nissan Motor Co. will increase production of pickup trucks at its U.S. unit in Smyrna, Tennessee, in an effort to recover mar-ipments was caused by the higher price of rehicles made in Japan because of the strong yen, coupled with increased competition from Nissan's U.S. unit produced nearly 80,000 pickup trucks in the January-August period, unchanged from a year earlier, he said.

Nissan also said Friday that it would increase production in Britain of its Bluebird car to about 45,000 next year against 29,000 in 1987.

The increased output is part of a £300 million ($500 million) plan to increase annual capacity at its plant in the northeast of England to 100,000 in 1991.

Aerospatiale Is Reorganizing Aircraft Division to Meet Orders

aircraft division to meet a rise in orders and the challenge of strong foreign competition, its chairman, Henri Martre, said Friday. He said that orders reached about 15 billion francs ($2.48 billion) in the first six months of this year, compared with 20.2 billion francs in orders for all of 1986. The European Airbus consortium, in which state-controlled Aerospatiale holds 38 percent, accounted more than half the orders in the first half. Mr. Martre said the figures reflected a reduced dependence on military orders.

Orders from the French Defense Ministry.

traditionally the company's principal domestic client, slipped last year by 10 percent.

"Ten years ago, military orders in France represented 65 percent of the market, said Gepercent left for the civilian market, said Ge ard Hibon, the group vice chairman. "Today, it s exactly the opposite."

Reorganization would include increased spe-cialization for each of Aerospaniale's 13 plants; splitting the aircraft division between production and marketing; and putting more work out to subcontractors.

HEWLETT: More Automation

A Drive for Efficiency

The Spectrum family of minicomputers is a prime example of how Hewlett-Packard is making products with fewer parts in less time. Shown: comparable data for the Model 3000/68, the previous high end commercial mini; the Model 3000/930, the first new Spectrum, and the Model 3000/950, today's high-end product. Bars are plotted on a percentage basis with the Model 3000/68 representing 100 percent.

(Continued from first finance page) Love, general manager in charge of computer manufacturing. "When you have your engineers so spread out, you don't have the depth to work on the things that are going to make you a leader in a couple of

Hewlett-Packard tried to correct the weaknesses on several fronts. Most important, it merged the marketing efforts of the instrument and computer groups and decided that all of the divisions making its new Spectrum family of minicomputers would use a centrally developed

Separate but adjacent computer manufacturing operations were merged in West Germany and in Cupertino and Roseville, California, after surveys showed that such moves could increase output without raising overhead substantially. Some outside observers say that the trend toward centralization should accelerate. "They have realized that to get the benefits of flexible automation, you have to change a lot of things," said Steven C. Wheelwright, a Stanford University professor who is a leading manufacturing expert.

"But they are taking more time than most people would expect."
An early sign of the shift toward centralization was the company's creation in 1984 of its Manufacturing Research Center, now headed by Peter M. Will, the designer of IBM's first robot.

Fuji Student Re-Accepted

NEW YORK - The University of Rochester has reversed a controversial decision and invited an employee of Fuji Photo Film Inc. to attend its graduate business school.

Under pressure from Eastman Kodak Co., which faces intense competition from Fuji, the university had previously rescinded the admission of Tsunco Sakai and had arranged for him to be admitted to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

University trustees then asked the faculty of the William E. Simon

School of Business to consider the matter, and they voted to reinstate the Fuji employee. The trustees said the faculty had not been consulted initially.

Mr. Sakai, who now lives in Arington, Massachusetta, said he had registered at MIT's Sloan School of Management. He said: "I'd like to stay in Boston, but I will answer that question" after being notified by the Simon School. In Thursday's statement, the university said it made the earlier decision to avent "severe problems" if Kodak withdraw up to 230 students a veget that it sends to the Simon School. withdrew up to 230 students a year that it sends to the Simon School.

ROBERT COLES, the psychiatrist and writer, turns up regularly in small-circulation journals and prefaces to books on the low-seller list. He is a soft touch for editors long accustomed to Pd-loveto-buts from famous dollar-a-word writers. Coles's apostolate to the out-of-the-way obviously moved him to write of Dorothy Day and Simone Weil, both works a part of the Radcliffe Biography Series. Crowds are not likely to be storming bookstores to read of two women who themselves preferred the literary fringes. Day, the journalist who co-founded the Catholic Worker in 1933 and who served the poor in the Lower East Side of New York until her death in 1980, lived with what Coles calls

"an inquiring idealism." The life and thinking of Weil. a teacher and writer who died at 34 in 1943, offered Coles "a chance to affirm an old love." Neither of these studies — both less than 200 pages long - is exhaustive. A brighter luster is present: a tone of reflectiveness. Coles is one of the few American intellectuals who regard the spiritual life as an essential companion to the political life. Both Day and Weil were women committed to understanding religion, and then using its nourishments to reform or revive the secular world. "In 1972," he writes in the preface to the Dorothy Day book, "I took part in a symposium organized by George Abbott White at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology devoted to the work of Simone Weil. Her brother and I spoke one afternoon, and I well remember his wry response to the title of the symposium, advertised on billboards, Simone Weil: Live Like Her? Andre Weil turned to me and said, 'I doubt many in the audience will want to answer yes to that question.' In the case of Dorothy Day, the question is a more plausible one. A few among us may finally be able to say yes. Though I am one who has to answer no, the question has haunted my life." For Coles, nothing about Dorothy Day was more important "than her own statements as they pertain to that central matter of moral inquiry: How should we try to live this life?"

Of the two works, the one on Dorothy Day has a sharper focus. Coles knew her. While a medical student in New York, he volunteered at the Catholic Worker house of hospitality in the Bowery. He came across her in the South in the 1960s and then in the 1970s when he made regular visits to her in New York to learn more about her politics and faith. For two years, he taped their frequent conversations. This informal oral history —50 hours' worth in 17 meetings - is a rich harvest for those who have read Day in her books and Catholic Worker newspaper mas, and thought that they picked up all that was there. They couldn't have. For those who are not familiar with Day, Coles is the best introducer

With Simone Well, whose "The Need for Roots" and "Waiting for God" are masterpieces, Coles is a assionate scholar. He scours the texts and letters of Weil's brief life and devotedly finds in them a record of uncommon intellectual honesty.

Weil worked in factories because she that writers and philosophers ought to perform manual labor as a way of attaining humility. In 1934 she worked as a power press operator at an electric-ity plant in Paris. The next year she hired out as a GARFIELD packer in one factory and as a milling machine operator in another. Coles writes that despite severe migraine she worked in factories to "see firsthand how it is, all the time, for working-class people. She stayed there, too, in a spirit of solidarity, or communion with others, an attempt not only to do a documentary field study, it might be called, but to put her body on the line. She had already become, in her early 20s, a stern critic of intellectuals, an unrelentingly harsh critic of what she regarded as their privileged and arrogant ways. She wanted an escape from libraries and salons and polite, speculative conversation, even though her mind was always busy with ideas and questions, with rumination and objections to what she had read or heard."

Lat Angeles Times Service
1.DS ANGELES — Going into the National Football League's sigh opening day on Sunday, one thing seems true of most American Conference teams: They have what it takes to finish second in the conference, or at least third.

But that's it: They all look like runners-up, although the Seattle Seabswirs, the Cleveland Browns. the Cincinnati Bengals and one or ctwo others are getting some support as first-place teams.

The Super Bowl will be played Jan. 31 in San Diego, and several ecous and coaches have conrhided that the Seahawks have the best chance to get there. They aren't saying this with a lot of confidence, however, suggesting that the Seshawks could be beaten by Cleveland, Cincinnati, the Denver Broncos, the New England Patriots and no fewer than five others.

There are, in other words, 10 pretty good AFC teams this year, ant no real standout. What's more, in the next five months, it is doubtful that any of them will improve enough to threaten the best of the NFC's top five — the Los Angeles Rams, the New York Giants, the Chicago Bears, the Washington Redskins or the San Francisco 49ers — in Super Bowl XXII.

In Seattle, for example, the quarerbacking has been erratic with Dave Krieg. Few Super Bowls have been won without consistency at that position. In Denver and Cleveland there are quality quarterbacks in John Elway and Bernie Kosar. but the Broncos have an indifferent unning game and the Browns have an inconsistent defense. As for the Los Angeles Raiders, a new quarrback and a new offensive line are eing broken in at the same time, a erous parlay.

The AFC's 1985 champion Patri-Section of white or of are a finesse team like the '86 champion Broncos, meaning that neither is tough enough, or runs the ball hard enough, to count on beating a tough opponent. The Bengals and the Miami Dolphins have shaky defenses. The Kansas City E. Chiefs have a shaky offense. The Buffalo Bills have an improving but still shaky team. Injuries have decimated the New York Jets. The AFC's top 10, in order:

"Chuck is one of the few coaches with three superstars," said Norm Pollom, a scout for the Buffalo Bills, identifying running back Curt Warner, wide receiver Steve Largent and safety Kenny Easley.

The Seahawks do have a fourth superstar: their stadium. Kingdome fans intimidate opponents. It NFL champions-to-be, the New York Giants, lost for the only time in their last 18 games.

Still, the pressure is on Krieg, the second-rated passer in the conference last season who has yet to prove he can be a big winner.

Cleveland Browns. In their big moment last January, in the AFC title game, they led with 38 seconds left. But Elway drove the Broncos 98 vards to tie the score and Denver won in overtime. Since, conceivably, the Browns have improved most with the return of running backs Earnest Byner and Kevin Mack from injury-plagued seasons. Kosar is strongest in the area where an NFL quarterback can continually improve most: finding the open receiver. But trading linebacker Chip Banks to San Diego burt the defense and the Browns had to draft a linebacker first, the highly regarded Mike Junkin.

Cincinnati Bengals. The most erratic team in pro football is led by the most erratic of the NFL's good quarterbacks, Boomer Esiason. Owners to Use Strikebreakers SCHAUMBURG, Illinois — The owners of the National Football League's 28 teams voted Thursday to continue playing with anyone who will cross the picket lines if the players strike this month.

The team owners also voted to accept a credit line in excess of $100 illion to protect against television revenue losses and ticket refunds. The players have set a strike deadline of Sept. 22. Negotiations were to Smith, and some quality in the ofbe resumed Saturday, with, it was commonly agreed, only one issue fensive line, behind which stands a agency for the players.

Asked if all 28 teams could find enough able players to field teams, Tex run 'n' shoot U.S. Football League; Schramm, general manager of the Dallas Cowboys, replied: "Certainly. I this is the season for him to prove think there are many players out there who would consider it the highlight that he belongs in the NFL.

"We're not going to do what we have in the past, which is shut down," Schramm said. "We're going after football entertainment. We wouldn't have any difficulty at all getting a team ready to play."

Jack Donlan of the NFL Management Council, the owners' chief negotiator, said that 19 teams had given $1,000 retainers to players cut during the preseason, to have them available if needed during a strike. The owners also clearly expect some union members to break ranks and play, as a handful have indicated they might.

"We will play with whatever players we can get to play, any that are coach, Frank Gansz, can do nei-available," Donlan said, "This is the fifth negotiations we've had with this ther. He hopes rookie runners Paul amion [in 1968, 1970, 1974 and 1982] and there have been four strikes. There is a high level of frustration among the owners."

fense. The result last year was a team that could score 3 points one week and 52 the next. These Bengals may be the same type of team, Denver Broncos. If they don't win it, the Broncos will be close. They usually are. Under the coaching of Dan Reeves, they have finished the last three regular seasons at 13-3, 11-5 and 11-5. Against long odds, Elway even made it close for more than a half against the Giants in the Super Bowl. The Broncos' problem is that their passer is also their best runner.

There is also trouble on defense, where the retirements of Tom Jackson. Louis Wright, Steve Foley, Barney Chavous and Ruhin Carter have taken away crucial leadership and experience. Nonetheless, with players such as Karl Mecklenburg, de-fensive coordinator Joe Collier always manages to make do on a club that seems to prefer strengthening the offense. Its No. 1 draft choice in 1987, typically, was sure-handed wide receiver Ricky Nattiel.

Los Angeles Raiders. Coach Tom Flores has some aces in his offense, but his defense might be on a de-cline — although the return of defensive coordinator Charlie Sumner should be good for a victory or two. Jim Plunkett, who is starting the season on injured reserve, was in Seattle last year that the might win one or two. Bo Jackson could win one or two. The Patriots are not a roughneck team, so have trouble running the ball. Their trademark is people like quarterback Tony Eason, a smooth passer, and Stanley Morgan, one of the smoothest of the NFL's receivers. An asset is backup quarterback Steve Grogan, who calls all the plays for Eason and himself.

Miani Dolphins. This is a team with four aces: quarterback Dan Marino, wide receivers Mark Clayton and Mark Duper and the coach, Don Shula. Four aces usually win in Las Vegas, but not in foot-

New York Jets. The complementary role that defense plays to ofwas never better illustrated than by the Jets last year, when their fast start (10-1) was negated by a series of injuries that first disrupted the defense, then knocked the offense off stride. The Jets are still hurt: defensive stars Joe Klecko and Lance Mehl remain out, and no one knows if Mark Gastineau will ever be the same.

Buffalo Bills. This team, drafting high after low finishes for many years, has picked up some defensive talent, including end Bruce highly paid quarterback, Jim Kelly. Kelly's reputation was made in the Kansas City Chiefs. Drafts by the last two coaches, Marv Levy and John Mackovic, have built a fine defense and enriched the special teams, offensive line and pass receiving. But the Chiefs have recently had big troubles in two fairly important areas - throwing and running the ball - and the new Palmer and Christian Okoye will

Ex-DePaul Basketball Star Is Arrested Because a DePaul Grad Sees Robbery

CHICAGO — A former co-captain of DePaul University's basketball team, Norman (Skip) Dillard, has been charged with a series of armed robberies — because a DePaul graduate who became a federal judge saw a gasoline station being robbed, police said. Dillard, DePaul's co-captain in the 1981-82 season, was charged Thursday with 17 counts of armed robbery, Sergeant Lee Epplen said. Detective Wayne Lippey said the motive, "in his own words," was Dillard, 27, and Andrew Robinson, 29, both of Chicago, were arrested when police traced a license plate following a holdup, Epplen said.

The Arrow as Public Art

By Richard F. Shepard

New York Times Service
NEW YORK — There is a certain street art in New York, art center of the Western world, that is brutally realist, pregnant with message, spurning the sloppy senti-ment of amateur graffiti. It shows up as abstract or representational and even those who know what they like, don't like this art on sight. It is a municipal collection, a million pieces, with 80,000 and more turned out every year in a shop that passes as atelier in Maspeth.

If you can't find yourself, in the way that novelists deal with, don't blame this art. It is direct and forceful, much more explicit than a Warhol soup can. It emphasizes the restraints of society that challenge the viewer's self-esteem as a liberated individual. "No Parking." "No Standing." "Don't Even Think of Parking Here." "No Turns." "Dip." "Bump." "Dead End."

Distant generations of archaeologists will ponder the proliferation of large signs that dwell on the arrow motif: arrows that curve. straight arrows, double-ended arrows. Other illustrations betray a preoccupation with linear convergence in their preference for relationships between central heavy markings and more slender diverging ones. The sponsor of this trove tation department, and its ambition is endless, to the point where some motorists complain that the totem-like stacking of signs on poles require pauses so long that you could get a ticket for stopping to read the small print that prohibits pausing.

trip through the shop in Maspeth and its stock of 7,000 different messages. The art room is reminiscent of a gallery, distinguished by collector's items such as the one-shot sign announcing the closing of the Brooklyn Bridge on its 100th birth-day. Or the 36-inch diameter porcelain emblem of the Organization of American States that adorns what New Yorkers still call Sixth Avenue but is the Avenue of the Americas. The country-by-country signs are one-of-a-kinds with ornate designs and they have been swinging in the wind for decades, thus threatened with an erosion the sign people are countering with a new system of fastenings. Or the Hebrew or Chinese limited editions of "Don't Even Think of Parking Here," the first as a traffic souvenir of New York to Tel Aviv, the other as a Chinatown decoration. Alternate-parkings and other signs are made by silk-screen process, just like T-shirts, to use Vitale's simile. Street-name signs, fashioned by a tape-and-bake process, are white on green, not the most aesthetic but the most lucrative in that, by conforming to federal standards, they can be made with money from Washington.

Woody Herman and the IRS

By Leonard Feather

Los Angeles Times Service
OS ANGELES — The crisis that erupted last weekend with a report of Woody Herman's imminent eviction from his home - a situation that was resolved Tuesday --- was many years in the making. More than 20 years have gone by since he unwittingly fell nto a financial abyss that has only deepened with the decades because of the interest and penalties on the tax money he owes.

The last publicly released figure for the 74-year-old jazz musician's indebtedness to the Internal Revenue Service was about $1.6 million. It is unknown how much, if any, of that has been whittled away over the years. Much of the inside story has been well known in music circles since Herman told it to Gene Lees for use in Jazzletter, a monthly publication written and circulated by Lees, the critic and songwriter.

Following is an excerpt from the "Jazzletter," dated June 1984: "Woody's manager for years was a corpulent diabetic ex-Marine ... named Abe Turchin....

We all loved Abe and said he had a heart of gold. And we all knew he gambled. But after all, it was his money. Or was it? For two years during the late 1960s, Abe gambled away the money Woody thought had been paid to the goverament for his income taxes. When the government stepped in, it was discovered that Abe hadn't filed withholding on the musi-

"And Woody was held responsible for all of it. He came close to going to prison. And he has been paying those taxes ever since. He told Artie Shaw a year or two ago, 'I'll be on the road the rest of my life."

Herman's daughter, Ingrid Herman Reese, confirmed the story. "The only inaccuracies." she says, "were that his name was Turchen, not Turchin, and there were three years, not two, for which taxes were not paid — 1964, 1965 and 1966." Turchen, she says, died many years ago. Efforts to confirm Turchen's death or to find survivors were

His employees' money was not forwarded to us," said Lowell Langers, an IRS spokesman. "It wasn't just a simple question of his own personal taxes." The IRS seized his four-bedroom, three-bath home in Hollywood and sold it for $99,800 in 1985 to satisfy some of that debt, Langers said. Herman's family claims the house is now worth about

During his 1984 interview, Lees asked Herman how he had the courage to keep on in the light of his difficulties. Herman's answer was: "Two reasons. The first is my love of music. The second is that I have an overwhelming need to make a living."

Speaking of his debt to the IRS, he said: "It gets bigger. My lawyer is trying to get a settlement for once and for all, and I am hoping he will."

A ligure behind the scenes is Leonard Garment, the prominent Washington lawyer, who as a young man had played saxophone and worked briefly in the Woody Herman orchestra. Garment said: "There are good law-

He was encouraged in this belief when plans were confirmed for the band to drop anchor at a "Woody Herman Room," adjacent to the Hyatt Regency Hotel in New Or-

"It's my own enterprise." he said. "We'll be spending 36 weeks a year at the same place, and I'll decide who replaces us when we're on the road. It will not only make my life easier, but it will do the same for the young men in the band." It only took about a year for the dream location to turn into a nightmare. By late 1982 business at the room was in a slump, and the hotel owners decided to abandon the project. Almost at the same time, Charlotte Herman, the former dancer whom Herman had married 46 years earlier, died after a long illness, at the Hollywood home the couple had bought from Humphrey Bogart in 1946 — the same home from which Herman was almost evicted Tuesday. Soon it was back to the old routine for the so-called "Road Father," though he would no longer make his own way between one-night stands: two vears earlier he had fallen asleep at the wheel, incurring injuries that necessitated months of re-Despite all the problems, there was recording regularly for Con-cord Jazz, traveled successfully at home and abroad and last year celebrated, a little in advance, Herman's 50th anniversary as a band leader. The band played its first gig in Brooklyn on election night 1936.

Clearly Herman's difficulties are not over; but neither is his life in the only true home he has known for four decades, and neither is the life of the Thundering Herd that has been, for countless future stars, the ultimate finishgovernment can seize any money ing school of American music.

No 'Charles Glass Story's throughout the world for being a light form journalist who escaped in August after two months of captivity in Beirut, says he has been showered with offers to tell his story but will just give a few lectures. "There is just something wrong with . . . making a lot of money out of being a hostage while friends are still hostage," Glass wrote in the British weekly Spectator. He said the lectures would be aimed at launching a new plan to benefit other captives. He did not describe the plan. Glass, 36, said that, since his escape Aug. 18, he has had offers from "scores of agents, publishers, filmmakers, television producers, editors and lecture tour impresarios . . . all offering to shower us with money — my apparent reward for the stupidity of having gone to west

An ear infection prevented the American composer Stephen Sondheim from attending the successful opening night Thursday of his revived musical "Pacific Overtures." Doctors advised Soudheim not to travel to London because of the infection, said Peter Jones, managing director of the English National tiop when it was staged on Broadway in 1976 but the audience at the English National Opera's London Coliseum theater gave the new production an enthusiastic reception. "Pacific Overtures" is being staged for the first time by an opera company.

Carter, 19, said, "Things just piled up on me while I was spending in energy on what I thought were more important goals. But if you put all of your time into extracurricular activities, you have to pay for it." Some of the time had been spent in defending herself, success Opera. "Pacific Overtures" was a Film star Bette Davis has been awarded the French Legion of Honor. "Maintenant I am Française," she said in flawless Franglais. Before pinning the medal on Davis's shoulder, French Culture Minister François Léotard called her "one of the greatest actresses of the world cinema." The presentation was made at the Deauville Film Festival.

The 16-year-old son of Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the exiled Soviet writer, is now rubbing elbow patches with Britain's young elite. Yermolay Solzhenitsyn is attending Eton, the premier prep school of the British establishment, which costs about $9,000 per academic year. "It was both my parents' and my own idea to come here," Yermolay said. "It has a reputation very good school."

Yes, another cultural glasnost story: Fred Rogers, the exceedingly mild-mannered overseer of the American children's television program "Mr. Rogers' Neighbor, hood," his crew and some puppets will head to the Soviet Union Sanday to film some segments for his children's show. While there, Rogers will visit the set of "Good Night, Little Ones," the Soviet Union's longest running kid-show. "Our hope is that both visits can help build a little bridge in behalf of children," Rogers said.

Amy Carter says part of the reason she began devoting herself to political causes was a close friend's suicide attempt. The daughter of former President Junny Carter quoted in an American magazine, gave no details but said that "a lot of my concern comes from having a best friend who tried to kill herself.

Something like that can really change the way you look at the world." Commenting on being dismissed from Brown University this summer for neglecting her studies.

The Mexican author Octavio Paz and the German philosopher Josef Pieper have been awarded the 1987 Ingersoli Prizes, the Ingersoll Foundation announced, Paz will receive the T.S. Eliot Award for Creative Writing and Pieper will receive the Richard M. Weaver Award for Scholarly Letters, the foundation said. The awards, which carry a cash prize of $15,000 each, recognize authors of lasting influence whose works, in the fourdation's words, affirm the moral principles of Western civilization. The Ingersoil Foundation is the philanthropic division of Ingenoll Milling Machine Co.
